BROADCASTING COMMISSION WARNS S.A.U.C.E. ABOUT UNLICENSED OPERATION

The Broadcasting Commission has issued a strong warning to S.A.U.C.E. Communications Network, along with a second Notice of Breach for supplying subscriber television service to an area where it is not licensed. The company, which now operates under the brand Flow, was warned that it risked a recommendation for licence suspension if there are any further confirmed incidents of unlicensed cable service. In December 2006 the Commission sanctioned the company for a similar infraction.

The Commission's investigation established that SAUCE was providing cable service to a home in the Barbican zone in the Corporate Area, a zone where it does not hold a licence.

The Commission's latest regulatory notice to SAUCE directed that the company's sign-up process be managed to comply with the law or the company risked having its licence suspended.
